

HARD FIGHTING SOUTH OF LIAO YANG KEEPS UP

Russian Losses are Great, Including Officers.

Three Days of Hard Fighting Preceded the Retirement of Russian Outposts—War News.

London, Aug. 29.—(Bulletin)—Fierce fighting today, south of Liao Yang. Russian losses Sunday and today have been very great. General Ruytzeffsky and Colonel Vomreaben are among the killed. The Japanese artillery fire was resumed at 6 o'clock this morning. The point of pressure is again on the Russian front south of Liao Yang. The advance scouts have fallen back. Firing by the Japanese was not opened with the same vigor as yesterday. "At this moment," a correspondent says, "the Japanese infantry is advancing for an attack, the regiment deploying men and pushing forward in open order."

Can't Resist Much Longer.
Paris, Aug. 29.—(Bulletin)—The Petit Journal prints a report today that General Stoessel has wired General Kuropatkin that the Russians at Port Arthur cannot hold out much longer.

Important Points Taken.
Paris, Aug. 29.—The Echo de Paris, today, received a dispatch from St. Petersburg stating that the Russian military authorities in the Russian capital admit that the Japanese have captured Itsehan fort and Outgrave heights at Port Arthur and that the Japanese are now in position which dominates a large position of the interior of the Port. The Japanese, however, are unable to bring up their siege guns as the remaining Russian positions can make the fire too hot for the Japanese to withstand.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 29.—All the news from Liao Yang, official or otherwise, shows that General Kuropatkin is gradually drawing in his advanced positions to the inner ring of defenses. After three days of heavy fighting, the latter part of which was impeded by rain, the Russians were compelled to disable six guns which it was impossible to take from the high positions over the muddy roads, but during the fighting on the southern front they captured some Japanese guns. It is reported also that they destroyed some Japanese mountain batteries. General Kuropatkin has not yet disclosed whether he intends to make a decisive fight at Liao Yang.

General disappointment is experienced by the newspaper correspondents at the withdrawals now in progress. The statement that the reserves were not called up to hold some of the positions which were abandoned seems to show that there is a strong force at Liao Yang which is not yet being utilized. At the same time, from private messages received from Liao Yang, it might be inferred that a heavy movement northward has been progressing for some days. General Kuropatkin seems to be well satisfied with the situation. One dispatch describes him as being in (Continued on Page 6.)

FIGHT

In Which Constable Was Killed and Three Others Badly Hurt on the Main Street.

Silver City, N. M., Aug. 29.—In a shooting affray here Constable Perfecto Rodriguez was killed, Town Marshal Kibourn was fatally and Patrick Nunn and Howard Chenoweth badly wounded. Nunn, who is foreman of the "Diamond A" cattle outfit, in an effort to influence several of his cowboys to return to the ranch, became involved in a fight with one of them. Chenoweth, a friend of the cowboy Nunn was trying to subdue, grabbed Nunn's revolver, which the latter had laid aside, and began shooting. Nunn was hit twice and Rodriguez was shot through the heart. Kibourn then attempted to disarm Chenoweth and was shot in the neck, his wound being considered fatal. Deputy Sheriff John Collier, armed with a shotgun, then engaged Chenoweth in a duel and shot the latter in the face and neck. The fight occurred on the main street of the town.

Four Illicit Saloons in Kansas Are Totally Wrecked—Much Liquor Is Destroyed.

Cuba, Kan., Aug. 29.—Four illicit saloons were wrecked by women here and much liquor destroyed. Mrs. E. O. Fitos and Mrs. William McDonald, wives of prominent business men, armed with hatchets, first entered without warning the place run by Ben Hull. Without ceremony they began to smash everything in sight, and soon they had demolished bar and fixtures and broken every bottle and opened every keg to be found. Later they were joined by 25 other women, and the entire party raided the other three places in Cuba.

RELATIVES

Between Argentina and Uruguay Are Strained—Battle Fought on Neutral Territory.

Buenos Ayres, Aug. 29.—A great sensation has been created here owing to the surprising by troops of the government of Uruguay of a Uruguayan insurrectionary force numbering 180 men, fully armed and equipped, under Colonel Pampillon, on a steamer on the Uruguayan coast, but in Argentine territory. President Ordenez of Uruguay had been warned that preparations were being made for an insurrectionary expedition, and dispatched two forces with armed vessels to watch for the expedition. At night the government troops attacked the insurrectionists with a continuous and merciless fire. Many of the latter swam ashore, but eight, badly wounded, were captured. The fate of the others is not known. The insurrectionary vessel was also captured and with it a considerable quantity of telegraph apparatus. Diplomatic relations between Argentina and Uruguay have become much strained owing to this incident.

Trees and other vegetation have begun to sprout in the crater of Mauna Loa volcano in Hawaii.

FAIRBANKS

FIGURING TO MAINTAIN HIS OWN
POLITICAL FUTURE.

Roosevelt Wouldn't Promise Him Not to Be a Candidate For Third Term in 1908.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 29.—Friends of Senator Fairbanks said Saturday he had taken the vice presidential nomination as a party duty and not because he wanted it, and that should the Democrats control the legislature he would refuse to take the vice presidency rather than see two Democrats—one to succeed Mr. Beveridge and the other to succeed himself—enter the senate from this State. It is contended that the senator, by refusing to qualify, would cause a vacancy in the vice presidential office which would be filled by a Republican under present laws, and that he still would be a senator because he would not have resigned.

The last new position is taken by Senator Fairbanks for two reasons. First, because it has become plain that Indiana is a doubtful State, with chances in favor of the Democrats carrying it.

Second, because in the personal interview Mr. Fairbanks had with Mr. Roosevelt at Oyster Bay a few days the Republican National Convention, the President refused to promise the senator that he would not be a candidate for a third term in 1908, in case he is elected this year.

It is well known that Mr. Fairbanks departed from the interview in a very much dissatisfied and disappointed state of mind. He is, therefore, figuring to maintain his political future by sticking to the senate, and is preparing for the worst.

Fate of a Murderer.

Newark, N. J., Aug. 29.—Nunzio Morano, 23, was shot and killed here by his brother-in-law, Giuseppe Marmanno, who also shot Mrs. Morano perhaps fatally. Marmanno in his effort to elude a crowd of pursuers ran into the salt meadow at the south end of the city, where the salt, covered by four feet of water, is in many places 10 feet deep and more yielding than quicksand. The meadow has been searched by men in boats, but no trace of Marmanno has been found, and it is believed he perished. The quarrel that led to the shooting was over a sum of money sent by Morano to Marmanno in Italy to enable the latter to come to America.

DAVID B. HILL ANNOUNCES HE WILL RETIRE

Says He Will Quit Politics
Next January.

In the Event of Democratic access He
Will Accept No National or State Position.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 29.—In a statement to friends here David B. Hill announced that he intends to retire from politics Jan. 1 next, and that, no matter what the result of the coming campaign may be in the state or nation, he will relinquish the leadership of the Democratic party in New York.

DAVID B. HILL.

He added that in the event of Democratic success this fall he would not accept any position under the national or state Democratic administrations or again become a candidate for election to any office whatever.

In partial explanation he said that he intended to take such action a year ago, but was persuaded by some close personal friends to defer doing so until after the presidential election this year. Having been engaged in active politics since his youth, and having served as city attorney, alderman and mayor of Elmira, member of the legislature, lieutenant governor for seven years and United States senator for six years, he feels that he has been sufficiently honored by his party, and that he has rendered political service during a period of years sufficient to entitle him to be relieved of further active political effort. He desires to devote more time to his personal affairs and professional duties than he has in the past.

WOMAN'S PARKER THEATRICAL CLUB

Members Visit the Judge to Tell What They Are Doing in His Behalf.

Esopus, N. Y., Aug. 29.—A three-seated backboard containing young women drew up by the door of Judge Parker's home Saturday and before either Secretary McCausland or the Rev. Mr. Hall could render them the hand assistance they had sprung nimbly from it. They were Miss Bertha Blake, Miss Estelle Perry, Miss Bess Stewart, Miss Charlotte Doly and Miss May York.

"We are," said they in a breath, "a committee of the Woman's Parker Theatrical Club, and we've come to tell Judge Parker that he is sure to be elected, and that we have already persuaded 150 actors to cast their votes for him. And, if you please, we want to see Judge Parker, and we want several bushels of campaign buttons, and we'll sing all the campaign songs that anybody has written."

They then seated themselves on the wicker chairs on the veranda and looked extremely cool and comfortable. Mrs. Parker shook hands with each, and after they had partaken of a light luncheon and met Judge Parker they re-entered the wagon and drove away.

OHIO NEWS

CINCINNATI WOMAN AND YOUNG MAN FOUND DEAD.

Privates Confession in Athens Tragedy—Manufacturer Killed—Buckeye News—Briefs.

Cincinnati, Aug. 29.—Mrs. Amanda Harter, 38, and James Leonard Martin, 29, were found dead in their flat in the Normandie, on Race street, under circumstances that indicate murder and suicide on the part of the man. With them lived Fannie Harter, 14, the niece and foster-daughter of the woman. Mrs. Harter came here originally from Macon, Ga. Her husband was in business here, but left her, charging her with infidelity. It is reported that the girl and her foster-mother were jealous of each other on account of Druehn, who came originally from Lebanon, Ky., and while employed at the postoffice here rented a room of Mrs. Harter.

The theory most credited was that Mrs. Harter in a jealous fit gave the girl a beating, that Druehn interfered, strangled Mrs. Harter to death and afterward cut her head into pieces with a hatchet. After he had cut Mrs. Harter's body in a horrible manner it is claimed that he wanted the girl to escape with him. When she refused to go with him he killed himself by shooting. One theory is that he remained with the girl and that he did not want to leave her. The girl openly mourns his loss.

AUTO. DASHED THROUGH FENCE KILLING TWO

Barney Oldfield Himself
Painfully Hurt.

Accident Caused By Dust Cloud Temporarily Obscuring His Vision
at St. Louis.

St. Louis, Aug. 29.—A double tragedy marred the automobile races here. His vision temporarily obscured by the dust thrown by the swiftly moving machine of A. C. Webb of Toledo, O., Barney Oldfield of Cleveland, O., lost control of his machine in a false start of the fifth event of the world's fair automobile speed contest and crashed through the outer fence of the course, instantly killing John Scott, a watchman employed at the park, and inflicting injuries upon Nathan Montgomery, a negro, from which he died a few hours later.

Oldfield was painfully injured and his machine was totally demolished. The accident occurred after a false start. The flagman vainly attempted to signal Oldfield and Webb, who were leading, that the start was not allowed, but they did not see his flag and continued around the course at a high rate of speed. Shortly after passing the first turn of the mile track Webb secured the lead by a narrow margin, and the men were in a relatively close position when passing the three-quarter pole. In making the turn Webb's machine skidded and raised a blinding cloud of dust that completely blinded Oldfield and half smothered him. Not being able to see that he had completed the turn, Oldfield continued his course and crashed through the fence. When Oldfield failed to appear after Webb had emerged from the dust cloud there was considerable excitement, but as it was announced that he was not seriously injured, and shortly afterward he was driven to the clubhouse in an automobile, it was not generally known that the accident had resulted fatally. After a delay the race was run, being won by Webb by a large margin. It was the most important event of the day, the prize being the Louisiana Purchase exposition trophy, valued at $500. Time 10:52.

After the races Barney Oldfield said: "This race is my last. I am through with the game, as far as racing is concerned. I may take part in exhibitions, but no more contests for me." This is the second serious accident that Barney Oldfield has figured in. At Grosse Pointe, Detroit, a few years ago, his car left the course, killing a man. Oldfield had three ribs broken.

It is believed that the garrison will make a desperate sortie before the end comes."

MARK TWAIN IN ITALY

Humorist a Jolly Neighbor, Says American Resident.

IDOLIZED BY PEOPLE OF FLORENCE

Language and Cigars of the Country Were Sources of His Mirth—Joke on Color of Overcoats Worn by the Farmers—Trouble With His Land-lady.

"You mustn't smoke too much," Dr. Kiersch of Florence, Italy, told Mark Twain while treating the famous Miss. sorian for bronchitis at the Villa di Quarto.

"How can I?" replied the humorist. "There are only twenty-four hours in a day."

George Gregory Smith of Florence, Italy, who was interviewed at the Jefferson hotel in St. Louis, told the story, says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. It is one of many anecdotes he relates of the "distinguished American."

"When Mark Twain came to Florence," said Mr. Smith, "he inquired about brands of Italian cigars. I recommended a cigar called the Brauca. I explained to him that I considered it good, although its price was five for a nickel."

"After he had smoked one he said: 'Smith, that cigar is like attar of roses or violet water. The only valuable thing about it is the cent.'"

"That was characteristic of Mark Twain while in Florence, as probably everywhere else. Gems of humor constantly dropped from his lips as well as his pen, and he didn't mind ringing in a pun occasionally."

"The Italian language, which he knew only imperfectly, afforded him a source of much merriment. So did certain Italian customs. He wrote just as he thought about these subjects, and the Italians, who have a keen sense of humor, enjoyed them instead of taking offense. One thing that made an instant impression on Mark Twain when he landed in Florence was the color of the overcoats worn by the contadini, or farmers, of the neighboring country. This color is a deep orange, a flaming shade. He wrote of these that the Italians wearing them:

"Looked like they had come from the hereafter and didn't have time to cool off."

"This was translated into Italian and hugely enjoyed by the Italians in the neighborhood of Florence."

"Mark Twain lived in Florence from last November until his wife died. He was idolized by the people there. The American and English colony worshiped him. Occasionally he gave readings in public, but the greater part of his time he spent in the beautiful villa he had leased. It happened that I leased the villa for him, and sometimes I wish I hadn't. It is about three and one-half miles from Florence toward Pistoia and is surrounded by a park of about twenty-five acres."

"Humorists have often written of other men having trouble with their landladies, but Mark Twain had real trouble with his. She happened to be a countess at that. When Mark Twain moved into the beautiful villa she asked him to take her 'fattore' or agent to manage his household. Twain refused, and from that time on throughout his residence there she did everything she could to inconvenience him. She declared she would drive him out."

"She interfered when he applied for a telephone, and made him wait three weeks for it. She put stones and rocks in the roadways of the park so his daughters could not ride or drive as they liked. She cut off the water supply for a time and then tried to have the villa declared in an unsanitary condition by the authorities."

"She even tried to arrange things so bells would ring near the house as often as possible while Mrs. Clemens was seriously ill. There is a little parish church back of the villa, and when the priest heard of Mrs. Clemens' illness he stopped ringing the bells for early mass for fear it might annoy the invalid. But the countess even objected to this."

"Concerning the countess I heard Mark Twain say:

"I really never expected to wish to meet anybody in h—l, but I'd like to meet that countess there, no matter at what personal inconvenience."

"Mrs. Clemens' death was a great blow to Mark Twain. Their married life was ideal. To him the world revolved about Mrs. Clemens. Incidentally her death showed the great popularity of her husband. Cablegrams of condolence and sympathy came to the Villa di Quarto when her death was announced, not by the dozen or hundreds, but, I say it advisedly, by the thousands."

"They came not only from the United States, but from all quarters of the globe. They came from China and from Siam and a large number from India, and they came from Africa and from islands in the Pacific ocean. They came from crowned heads and potentates and dignitaries of all kinds. I honestly believe that the cablegrams which Mark Twain received after his wife's death were more numerous than those received in London after the death of Queen Victoria."

WHAT WOMEN ARE WEARING

The Latest in Shoes—The Woman Who Dresses in Black.

Champagne and yellow are among the smart tones seen this season. A pongee or ecru linen gown, trimmed with coarse lace, is the very thing for afternoon occasions, church, the races, etc., in warm weather, especially when a costume of this description is combined with an ecru hat and champagne colored shoes.

The latest in shoes is the garden tie, made like a slipper, with a slightly heavier sole and a tiny tongue, so small that it almost escapes notice. This displays to great advantage the stocking of fine openwork or lustrous silk and is therefore suited for wear with dressy gowns.

The smart woman who wears much black should have three gowns at least, one very thin and gauzy, such as crepe de chine silk, voile or colombine, another of fine black cloth and one of silk, inlaid with black lace, to wear over black or white slips.

In lingerie, night gowns are nearly all made low neck, the handsomest being trimmed with embroidery and V-shaped ruffles of lace, while others have round Dutch yokes of fine lace and needlework.

The picture shows a costume of tan veiling, trimmed with ecru revers and frills. The skirt shows the fashionable full flounce. The hat is trimmed with two yellow roses.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

SUMMER SUITS.

Linen Coat and Skirt Costumes—Pongee Three-quarter Coats.

The rage this year is for bright colored linens. Red linen is one of the novelties. Ecru and lavender are always smart also. To wear with these linen suits there are charming filmy waists of embroidered muslin. Linen suits themselves are made in two styles—the frocks and frills with the very short coat and half sleeves, and the tailor made with the smart three-quarter coat, tight fitting in the back and loose in the front. There is a species of sack coat, too, which comes in linen. It is cut without any curves and is loosely belted in at the back.

The pongee three-quarter length coat is one of the smart garments of the season. It is trimmed with scarlet, with green, or the new shade of bright blue, and some of them even are trimmed with bands of taffeta of a shade to match.

Many changes can be made in a few costumes by a clever change of accessories. An ivory lace coat, for instance, may be worn with a black or a white skirt or even one of pale gray and a white blouse. The economical woman also changes the flowers in her hat to make it go with different colored gowns.

Shirt waist costumes of checked silk still continue to be the fashion, and to these are added linen coat and skirt costumes of the same fascinating black and white check trimmed with wide black braid and silver buttons.

The picture shows a foulard blouse trimmed with plain, darker silk and a white mouseline de soie yoke.

AMERICAN RICE CROP.

Possibilities of Its Cultivation in the Southwest.

INCENTIVE TO TOWN BUILDING.

Profits of Farmers From Harvests Have Been Used in Establishing Banks and Aiding Growth of Communities—Rice Growers Ambitious to Compete With China and Japan.

During 1902 about 10,000 railway cars of the average capacity were required to haul the product of the southwestern rice fields to market, says a writer in Guntton's Magazine. The crop at present averages about 2,000,000 barrels annually and could supply two-thirds of the present consumption in the United States. When it is remembered this is merely what has been accomplished on a tenth of the area that is available for cultivation in Louisiana and Texas an idea of the possibilities of the region can be gained.

The agricultural and social development resulting from the influx of people and capital into the section referred to has progressed far beyond the experimental stage and can be said to exist on a permanent basis. It has actually resulted in the formation of a new group or community that is well worth studying. The residents of the towns and cities are as dependent upon the soil as are the rice growers themselves. Prior to the division of this prairie land into fields intersected by a network of canals reaching from one end of the cultivated district to the other there was no incentive for town building, and had it not been for the efforts of the little group of Iowa farmers who first began growing rice by modern methods the country would probably still be as poor and as sparsely settled as a half century ago.

As the growers have prospered those depending on them have prospered also, and the money into which the harvests have been converted has been distributed in a variety of ways. While the farmers have taken advantage of science and invention to aid them by employing labor saving machinery, they have not neglected public improvements. Their profits have established banks and aided in the growth of these communities in other ways.

In a tour of southwestern Louisiana and eastern Texas it is easy for one to imagine himself in a Kansas or Nebraska town, for everywhere prevails the bustle and bustle of the west.

The belief is prevalent that the consumption of rice in the United States has but begun. Apparently rice is considered an occasional rather than a staple food, served merely to vary a menu, although a very large quantity is used annually by the southerners, both white and negroes, with whom it is a regular article of diet. It is unnecessary to refer to the opinion of chemists, who class the cereal as among the most beneficial of foods and cite the vigor and hardihood of the Japanese and other eastern races who subsist so largely upon it as illustrations of its good properties.

The southwestern rice grower is looking to the future, and, although he has good reason to be content with the results already attained, he is far from being satisfied. He desires to compete with the Japanese and Chinese in the markets of the world, to send his rice to the Asiatic market, for he believes that a quality equal if not superior to the home grown cereal can be sold in eastern Asia at a profit, yet lower than the native can sell it. He argues that the construction of the Panama canal means an incentive to a further development of the rice territory that will cause the present activity to seem small in comparison, for the canal means a direct route not only to the great market of the east, but to the Pacific coast of both Americas.

Music of the Corn.

The grand armies of peace are encamping afield. There is no glint on the spear, no blaze on the shield. No flashing of helmet nor the gleaming of blade. For the shaft of each weapon is with pearl inlaid. Their standards are glistening with the dew of the dawn. And growing in splendor with the growing of corn.

And there's music far sweeter than the clarion horn— 'Tis the life giving music of the rustling corn.

How stately and majestic and graceful in men Are the soldiers of peace in their mantles of green! O'er the brow of each soldier waves a tall, tasseled plume— An emblem of plenty is the straw nodding from.

From the land of the prairies and realms of the morn They are coming, their arms brimming with golden corn. And there's music far sweeter than the clarion horn— 'Tis the life giving music of the rustling corn.

They are marching abreast where the dim sky line dies. The grand armies of peace, born of earth and the skies. Neath their ribbons and pennons there are no ugly scars. The trophies of victories, the red ensigns of wars.

Bread-givers for the nations, more fruitful than trees. The tread of their legion is heard across the wide seas. Keeping step to the music of Plenty's full born— 'Tis the life giving music of the rustling corn.

ADMIRAL JEWELL.

The Man Who Will Back Up American Demands on Turkey.

Once more the United States has been having trouble with that survival of the dark ages, the Turkish empire. In common with other civilized nations the United States has found its patience sorely tried time and again because of the treatment accorded American citizens in the country of the sultan. In the present instance the American government was forced to take action because of the dilatory policy of the sultan in putting in effect reforms relating to the American schools, hospitals and charitable institutions. The sultan of Turkey is apt to respond more quickly to polite requests if the moral influence of a fleet of warships is tried, and for this reason the European squadron, under Rear Admiral Jewell, was ordered to Turkish waters. The ships in the European squadron are the Olympia, Baltimore and Cleveland.

One of the sources of difference between the United States and Turkey is the status of graduates of American medical colleges who go to practice in Turkey. The United States claims protection for them equal to that accorded graduates of European medical schools. It also claims for American religious and educational institutions in the sultan's domain protection equal to that given those of European nations.

Rear Admiral Theodore F. Jewell, who commands the European squadron, is a veteran of both the civil and Spanish-American wars. He was born at Georgetown, D. C., in 1844, and graduated from the United States Naval academy in 1864. In the war with Spain he commanded the cruiser Minneapolis of Commodore Schley's flying squadron and did valuable scouting in the West Indies. In 1899 he succeeded Captain Cook as commander of the Brooklyn. He attained the rank of rear admiral this year.

WOMEN DO MEN'S WORK.

In Japan and Korea Wives Are Busy at Husband's Tasks.

War between Russia and Japan has made it necessary for the women of the nations affected to suffer as well as the men. In Japan, where so large a proportion of the men are in the field fighting for their country's preservation, tion, much of the work ordinarily performed by males is now done by women. The same may be said as to Korea, which was invaded by the Japanese soon after the outbreak of war with Russia. When the warlike men from the mikado's country pushed on into Manchuria they impressed into their service a large proportion of the male population of Korea, making some fight, but employing most of them in menial work and in carrying their supplies.

In Japan women have taken up the work left by the men and are now tilling the fields, working on the docks and wielding picks and crowbars in digging sewers in Tokyo. In Korea the women have been accustomed from time immemorial to do arduous manual labor, but war has rendered their tasks more laborious than ever. While the Korean men are carrying on their backs or strung between poles the rations and camp equipment of the warriors of Japan, the Korean women are tilling the fields, grinding the corn with primitive corn pounders or carrying jars of water from the village well. Often a Korean woman may be seen at work with a child upon her back.

ECHOES FROM THE WAR

Adventures of a Russian Spy in Manchuria. ROUTED A DETACHMENT ALONE.

Shot Japanese Officer and Six Men While Out Scouting—The Others Retreated—French View of Japan. Russian Red Cross at Work—Unselfishness of Czar's Officers.

An interesting story of the adventures of a Russian spy named Volkoff recently appeared in the St. Petersburg newspapers. The man gives the following account of his experiences, says the London Chronicle:

"After the battle of Vafangov I was lying near General Samsonoff's tent and heard him say to the commander of the regiment, 'We must send out a scout to the Japanese who could spy out their positions and report to us.' I offered to go disguised to the Japanese position. I was given six rubles to bribe Chinamen, if necessary, and also a revolver. I shaved my hair in front like a Chinaman, tied on a pigtail and put on a Chinese dress, with slippers and hat."

"At dawn on July 20 I came to the town of Senuchen. There was nobody there. The Russians had left it and the Chinese had all run away. Suddenly a cavalry detachment of about twenty men, with an officer, came toward me. The officer rode out and asked in Chinese where the Russians were and what was their strength. I knew a little Chinese and answered him, but either I said something wrong or he noticed my revolver and money bulging out. At any rate he became suspicious and spoke some words to his men. Two of the latter thereupon dismounted and came toward me."

"I decided to sell my life dearly, for I knew it would be forfeited if I were captured. I pulled out my revolver, and as the two soldiers approached I fired two shots at them. Both the men fell. Then I fired at the officer, bringing him to the ground, and afterward emptied the revolver at four other men. The soldiers lost their heads and galloped away, and as they did so I saw the four men I had shot at fall severally from their saddles badly wounded."

"Then I jumped on one of the horses which had remained close by and galloped away for my life. General Samsonoff promoted me to the rank of an under officer, gave me the horse and saddle and sent me to the commander in chief, who thanked and embraced me and conferred upon me a decoration. The horse was a brown one, well groomed and shod. It had been taught to catch bread like a dog," concluded the man, "and all the Japanese horses seem to be like mine. When it is hungry it opens its mouth to beg for something."

A well known eastern traveler, M. Eugene Gallois, who has represented the French government on special missions abroad, recently returned to Paris from Japan, says the New York Times.

The success of Japanese arms, he thinks, will mean the ruin of European commerce throughout the far east, and the chief losers will be the English and Americans.

Japan has her spies all over the far east, and even Tongkin, administrative center for French Indo-China, is not exempt in spite of the vigilance of the French government. Moreover, it is an open secret that the Japanese have a longing for possession of French Indo-China and that the plans for its invasion have already been drawn up by the Japanese general staff.

A Russian correspondent describes the work of the Red Cross society in Manchuria. The correspondent was in Harbin, and his observations were made in the three hospitals there under the charge of Dr. Botkin, the head of the Red Cross committee, says the London Sphere. He says:

"Each hospital contains 200 beds, and there is another used exclusively for officers. The wards were full. I can safely say that in no previous campaign have I ever seen such admirable medical arrangements. They were almost perfect. The walls of the wards were all of a uniform color—a soft white—which had a most resting effect on the eye and brain of the wounded. I was particularly struck with the contented expression on the faces of many of the men, numbers of whom had recently arrived in the hospital trains from the front. Dr. Botkin in the course of his conversation informed me that many of the wounded had told him what confidence the mere knowledge gave them when going into action that in the event of their being hurt they would be both skillfully and tenderly treated by the Society of the Red Cross."

"He commented also on the unselfishness and fortitude displayed by the officers, who on being brought into the hospital for treatment insisted on the private soldiers being first attended to. This self abnegation on the part of the officers produced a most excellent impression on the rank and file, who also bore their suffering heroically. Dr. Botkin further showed me a small chapel which was attached to the main building, so that the spiritual as well as the temporal needs of our soldiers are provided for. Services are held regularly, and many of the convalescents find their way thither. I was also much struck by the quiet and business-like manner in which the large staff of sisters went about their multifarious duties. They work unceasingly night and day, doing everything possible to alleviate the pains of the sufferers, who much appreciate their untriflingly sympathetic ministrations."

FAVORITE OF CZAR.

Admiral Prince Ouktomsky, Who Commands Port Arthur Fleet.

Admiral Prince Esper Ouktomsky, upon whom by virtue of his rank the command of the Russian Port Arthur fleet devolved on the death of Admiral Witthoff, is a remarkable character. It is a singular coincidence that he was left in command of the same fleet once before through the death of his superior, who in this instance was Admiral Makaroff, the brave commander who was drowned in the blowing up of the Petropavlovsk. The prince at this time showed that he was possessed of signal courage. He is an intimate friend of the czar and on that account has enjoyed exceptional freedom in the expression of his opinions through the St. Petersburg newspaper, the Viedmosti, which he owns. He belongs to the most ancient of Muscovite nobility.

A GREAT LINGUIST.

A New Genius Discovered in Professor Trombetti of Italy.

A new genius has been discovered in Italy. He is Professor Alfredo Trombetti, who is said to know more languages than any other man in the world. This remarkable linguist is but thirty-eight years old and has never been away from his native Italy. His wonderful acquirements were first brought to public attention by a book which he recently wrote, entitled "Connections Between the Languages of the Old World," which was sent to the Italian Academy of Sciences in competition for a prize. He was born of poor parents and apprenticed to a barber at an early age, but all the time he could spare from razors and brushes he spent on books.

It has been computed that President Roosevelt in his published writings and public speeches has used the word "weaking" 37,942 times; "craven" 41,211 times, and "coward" 46,019 times. When it comes to TALKING about fighting, Andrew Jackson's great overcoat wouldn't make Roosevelt a vest.

Administration Officers are All Absent from Washington.

Neither the President of the United States nor a single member of his cabinet is to be found these days in Washington, and with their absence is noted the disappearance of a large class of necessary and useful officials, not of such high grade as cabinet officials, but bureau chiefs and heads of departmental divisions. The President himself is in Oyster Bay. Secretary Hay is in New Hampshire at his summer home. Secretary Shaw is on his way West to make political speeches. Secretaries Taft and Wilson are in the Vermont campaign. Secretary Metcalf is in the California campaign. Postmaster General Payne is in Chicago with the Western Republican headquarters, while Secretary Morton and Attorney General Moody are cruising at Government expense on one of President Roosevelt's men-of-war.

The Government officers have been furloughed from their duties at the capital to work for the election of the strenuous civil service reformer at the head of affairs. They are on big salaries of eight and ten thousand a year for their campaign work. The Democratic stumblers, as it is right and proper, have to pay their own way. The Government departments are crammed with official deadheads.

Democratic Pole Raising.

The first gun of the Democratic campaign in Licking county was fired in Hanover township on Saturday night, when a number of the staunch and enthusiastic Democrats under the leadership of Mr. Samuel Walker, assembled on his farm and raised a fine Parker and Davis hickory pole. The pole is about 52 feet in height, topped off with a fine streamer. This is the first Democratic pole raised in the county, and Mr. Walker is entitled to great credit for the interest he has taken in the matter. The Democrats of Hanover township evidently are becoming alive to the issues of the present campaign, and a good report may be expected from them in November.

DEMOCRATS

OF LICKING COUNTY PLEASE TAKE NOTICE.

Statement Issued By Chairman and
Secretary of the County Executive Committee.

To the Democrats of Licking County:
We have sent to all township and district committeemen a letter urging them to call a primary election or caucus, on or before September 17 for the purpose of putting in nomination candidates for all township, school and village offices for which election would have been held last spring had the law not been amended by the legislature.

In Bowling Green township, north and south precincts of Union township, Licking township, Hopewell township, and Hebron village corporation, there have been held primary elections or caucuses and nominations have been made and certified to the county board of elections, which under the law must stand as the nominations for the coming general election. But these townships and corporations will take notice that an additional primary election or caucus must be held by them for the purpose of placing in nomination five candidates for members of school boards, two for three years and three for four years, as provided by the new school code. All other townships, village and special school districts must make the same nominations, as all present school boards cease to exist upon the election and organization of this new board. By reason of the fact that our school code has been entirely changed by the legislature, although the Hebron special school district has made its nomination and certified to the same it will be necessary as the law now stands for this district to hold a second primary election or caucus, and put in nomination five candidates for members of school board as afore mentioned. If any township or other district has made its nominations and has failed to certify the same to the county board of elections, such certificate must be made at once and a primary election or caucus in such district called for the purpose of putting in nomination the candidates for members of the school board as above stated and for that purpose only.

Secretary.

An ancient custom still prevails in Cork. ## BRYAN

DEFENDS HIS SUPPORT OF JUDGE PARKER.

Says It Is Better to Support the Ticket Than Assist in Electing Roosevelt.

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 29.—William Jennings Bryan, in the Commoner, answers those who have criticised him for his support of Judge Parker. He says:

The Eastern Democrats find fault because the support is given without endorsing the methods employed to secure the nomination and without holding out hope of economic reform.

The criticism is not valid. Mr. Bryan owed a duty to the loyal Democrats of 1896 and 1900 as well as to the organization and he could not help the ticket by pretending to be delighted with the nomination, neither could he help the ticket by trying to drive those who have trusted him. He can do the most good and render the best service to the ticket by pointing out that in spite of all he himself has said—in spite of all any one else can say—it is better to support the ticket than to assist in the election of President Roosevelt. He has given reasons that seem to him sufficient and satisfactory, and he hopes to be able to give additional reasons after Judge Parker's letter of acceptance appears.

The good effect of Mr. Bryan's statement is already apparent. Many have announced their intention to support the ticket who before were in despair. They see now where they can support the ticket and still continue the fight for economic reform; they see that the election of Judge Parker will remove imperialism, militarism and the race question and clear the way for a fight on economic questions.

Neither is the populist criticism valid. It is more important that reforms shall be secured than that those reforms shall come through any particular party. The total Populist vote is small compared with the number of Democrats who desire reform. Mr. Bryan can do the cause of reform more good by helping these Democrats to control the Democratic party than he could by joining the Populists.

If Judge Parker carries out the Democratic platform we shall make progress during his administration; if he refuses to carry out the platform he will make it easier for the reform element to regain control of the organization.

The Advocate offers $500 in cash and prizes for the best estimates on the total vote in Licking county at the November election. It costs nothing to participate. All who pay their subscription in advance will be entitled to make estimates. There are 136 prizes. Read the full announcement in another column.

"INSIDE INN" ADVANTAGES.

Why the Only Hotel in the World's Fair Enclosure Promises to Be a Popular Hostelry.

COMFORT AT MODEST PRICES.

There is one large hotel on the grounds of the World's Fair at St. Louis called "The Inside Inn." It has a capacity of accommodating with comfort and safety, 6,000 guests. It is located near the southeastern corner of the grounds and convenient to two of the entrances. In its immediate vicinity are many of the beautiful buildings erected by the states and territories.

The Inside Inn is embowered in natural forest trees. It is in fact a big bit of suburban enterprise set in the edge of a great city. From the doors and windows of the Inside Inn one is not compelled to look upon sunbaked stone streets, sweltering alleys and dead walls. On the contrary, the guest has an outlook upon a primeval forest in which appear here and there the inviting outlines of new houses built without qualms as to cost and embellished with all the artistic adornments that architecture can supply. Looking farther, the guest may behold the graceful towers and the stately domes of the most wonderful city on earth—the Louisiana Purchase Exposition.

In short, the guest at the Inside Inn will be practically a summer resort, away from the din and clamor and dust and heat of the busy city, and yet near enough to the World's Fair glories to behold some of them from his window and to reach any of them in a few minutes. If perchance he shall become weary of the wonderful wealth of things to see and hear, for the time being, he may hie him back to the Inside Inn, where in his own apartments or in the cozy lounge-rooms or parlors of the Inn he may enjoy a delightful rest, fitting him for a return to the heart of the World's Fair, refreshed and revived.

The guests at the Inside Inn will be the only visitors who can see the World's Fair from their own front door, so to speak; for at the Inn they will be at home, and while viewing any part of the great Exposition they will have the satisfaction of knowing that a short walk or a brief ride on the intramural cars will take them home without going outside the grounds.

SPANISH WAR

Newark Camp Represented at State Convention This Week By Col. Cliff Rosebrough.

Colonel Clifton H. Rosebrough will go to Wapakoneta Tuesday, August 30, as delegate from Sam Williams Command United Spanish War veterans, of Newark.

The following article will interest the ex-Spanish War soldiers:

At a regular meeting of Harry C. Egbert Camp, United Spanish War veterans, held at Jackson Hall, Cincinnati, Lieutenant Alex. Frank was elected as delegate to the State Convention of O. V. S. W., to be held at Wapakoneta, Ohio, August 29 and 30. This command will send a large delegation to the convention.

Through very liberal donations of the citizens of Wapakoneta, Dr. D. C. Mueller, who is in charge of all arrangements, is enabled to offer unusual attractions to the visitors. Cash prizes will be given to the largest camp in the parade, best uniformed camp, best marching camp, best decorated carriage in the flower parade, best band and best drilled squad.

A reviewing stand will be erected for Senator Dick, the reviewing officer, and other eminent visitors, also large tribunes for the spectators. The addresses in the evening will be made from the reviewing stand if the weather permits.

Four squads have already entered for the drill contest, and there will be a lively competition for all the prizes. A special feature will be a beautiful flag drill executed by 36 uniformed young adies.

At this meeting delegates will be elected to the National Convention to be held at St. Louis, September 19 and 20.

This is the first convention of the Amalgamated Spanish War societies. Their membership represents 65,000 ex-Spanish War soldiers, sailors and marines. National headquarters will be established at the Indiana State building on the grounds of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, and all delegates will be admitted to the exposition free on these dates. Special rates will be given by all railroads.

AMUSEMENTS

Every patron of Idlewild Casino has this season been furnished his favorite kind of amusement, as Manager Harris has run the gamut of theatrical attractions including vaudeville, minstrel and repertoire.

The bill at the Casino this week is a continuous performance and while it is a dramatic production there are vaudeville specialties introduced which are in every respect first class. At no time is there a wait during the entire evening, the front curtain never being lowered after the opening overture.

The company now playing is known as the Royal Pathfinders, and is one of the best repertoire companies in the business. Their opening bill Sunday night was an English comedy drama, entitled "A Soldier's Sweetheart," and it was easily seen by the liberal and spontaneous applause, that the audience enjoyed every moment of the evening's amusement.

Miss Flora Wentworth as "Elsie Lovell" did most creditable work. She is one of the handsomest women ever seen on the stage in Newark, and her histrionic ability is of a high order.

The leading man, Mr. Claude Boardman was also well cast Sunday night, and he received generous and deserved applause.

The specialties, which change every evening, include Miss Russell in a musical act which is clever; Clifford Worth, a comedian whose monologue and songs are greeted with enthusiastic applause, and the two Lockharts, in dancing and the best contortion act seen this season at the Casino.

To these specialties will be added during the rest of the week, "Baby" Land, the highest-salaried child artist in America, in a singing and dancing turn.

Tonight the dramatic bill will be "A Cheerful Liar," a roaring farce comedy.

AUDITORIUM TONIGHT.

Thirty-nine automobiles were lined up in front of the Columbia Theatre last night, says the Boston Post, the party being made up of friends and admirers of Elsie Crescy, who had come to welcome the popular little actress in her first appearance in her new play, "To Die at Dawn."

The play is from the pen of E. Lawrence Lee, who unlike most aspiring author-actors, has cast himself as the villain and in the role of George Drake, he gives an admirable conception of all that a cool, crafty, gentlemanly knave should be. A bright vein of comedy runs throughout the play and the supporting company is excellent. Auditorium tonight.

INHERITED SCROFULA

When a child I had a very severe attack of Diphtheria, which came near proving fatal. Upon recovery the glands of the neck were very much enlarged, and after the free use of iodine, the right one was reduced to its normal size, but the left one continued to grow—very slowly at first, until it was about the size of a goose egg, which began to press on the wind-pipe, causing difficult breathing, and, before long, a large quantity of pus discharged. The gland was removed, or as much as could with safety be taken out. For ten years I wore a little piece of cloth about an inch long in my neck to keep the place open. During this time I had to have it cut open by the doctor every time I took cold or the opening clogged. In the Spring or early Summer of 1884 I was persuaded by my wife to use S. S. S., which I did, strictly in accordance with directions. I took twenty-six large bottles, and was entirely cured, for I have not suffered since that time.

RURAL CARRIERS

CONVENTION OF STATE ASSOCIATION BEING HELD IN NEWARK

Carriers Welcomed to City by Mayor Crilly—Response By State President—Banquet Tonight.

The second annual convention of the State Association of Rural Mail Carriers of Ohio, convened in this city at 10 o'clock Monday morning, August 29, for a two days' session. The meeting was held for the purpose of getting together and more thoroughly organizing the rural mail carriers of the State, and to bring about a better condition of its members and to cooperate at all times with the Department for the advancement of the Rural Delivery Service.

There was a large attendance from all over the state, and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed among the delegates.

The convention was called to order on Monday morning by State President Lee Miles of Lexington, Richland county, who briefly stated the object of the meeting. J. M. Whitehead of Medina, the State secretary, was present and recorded the minutes of the convention.

President Miles then appointed the following committees, with instructions to make their reports not later than Tuesday morning:

Credentials: J. L. Stinebrecker, Hamilton county; O. A. Beery, Portage county; J. L. Adkinson, Guernsey county.

Mileage and Per Diem: G. A. Boons, Wyandot county; M. H. Heyner, Franklin county; George Feather, Wood county.

Resolutions: J. M. Henderson, Coshocton county; J. J. Ziegler, Stark county; A. P. Drumm, Muskingum county.

Constitution and Law: J. W. Whitehead, Medina county; W. C. Sprague, Portage county; W. R. Dumbay, Ash-tabula county; W. C. Jones, Stark county; F. Beverstock, Richland county.

The delegates were then furnished with appropriate badges, after which the convention adjourned until 1 o'clock Monday afternoon.

An open meeting was held Monday afternoon, which was attended by a large number of citizens in addition to the carriers. Shortly after 1 o'clock President Miles called the convention to order.

President Miles then introduced Mayor A. J. Crilly, who, in a neat and appropriate address, welcomed the Carriers to Newark, and turned over to them the keys of the city. The Mayor said he wished the Carriers every possible benefit that could be obtained. His address was greatly appreciated not only by the Carriers but by all who were present.

In response to the address of welcome delivered by Mayor Crilly State President Lee Miles, among other things said:

"Gentlemen of the convention—I was not aware that I was on the program for this occasion until I arrived in the city this morning, but as one of the executive committee of rural mail carriers of Ohio whom I have been trying to serve, I desire to make a few remarks. Occasionally there comes a time in the tide of human affairs when executive as well as private individuals and others feel it their duty to express their appreciation for the sympathy and good will toward the Carriers, and especially the efforts of the local branches, which have caused the State Association to be one of the leading ones in connection with the National Association. We are here, men engaged in the same occupation, for counsel, and to express our opinions, and although we may differ, our interests are mutual. We are here to carefully observe our surroundings for truth and fairness, also to utilize our power and wisdom in securing practical and successful results, and to center upon some good plan that will result in the greatest good for the greatest number, not only to seek remuneration alone but in affirmation of our rights and privileges. We appreciate this program thus far—the efforts of the minister, the music, the able address of Mayor Crilly, and we appreciate the attention that has been given the proceedings throughout. Again, we welcome you.

Addresses were also made by Postmaster J. M. Ickes on "Rural Mail Carriers"—their service; Judge Badger of Columbus: W. B. Gaithe on "Insurance," and H. H. Windsor on "Salvage," and a number of others, all of which were attentively listened to and which were very much appreciated.

A banquet will be served in the lodge room of Roland lodge, Knights of Pythias in the Ankele block this evening, by Caterer Spencer of the Manhattan hotel.

Revolt Against Republican Demand For Big Campaign Contributions—A Threat Alleged.

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 29.—The rural mail carriers connected with the local postoffice are in a state of revolt against the Republican Campaign committee, owing to a written demand which has been made upon each member by George W. Long, chairman of the Republican Finance committee of the State, that they shall each contribute $20 to the campaign fund.

The letter states that the rural carriers owe it to themselves and to their brother carriers all over the country that the contributions shall be made as a means of insuring the retention of their positions. The letter also states that a list of contributors will be sent to Chairman Cortelyou of the National Republican committee, which is construed here as a threat of dismissal in case of failure to comply.

More than 50 per cent of the carriers declare they will not contribute the amount asked for, as it means to them nearly one month's wages, which they cannot afford to give. Richard P. Ernst, it is said, has addressed a similar letter to all federal office holders here requesting a contribution of $45 each.

The Advocate offers 130 premiums, amounting to $500 for the best estimates on the total vote in Licking county at the coming November election.

Sakharoff's Dispatch.
The emperor received the following from Lieutenant General Sakharoff, dated Aug. 27: "Yesterday the Russians retired slowly on Anshanshan. The Japanese bombarded the Russian fortified positions and the Russians replied against the advancing Japanese with such effect that the Japanese were compelled to move their bivouac from Tamae-san to Saccizai. Firing ceased at 6 o'clock in the evening. The hottest fighting occurred on the Russian left flank, where the Russian losses were 200.

"On the southeast the Russians repulsed all the Japanese attacks, while our troops on the right flank assumed the offensive and drove the Japanese towards Tou Sinau and Tasintup. Our losses amounted to 400. Yesterday evening there was a vigorous engagement on the east front, the Japanese advancing on Anshanshan. They were repulsed, however, though the Russians had no artillery, the battle being carried on at the point of the bayonet. The Russians finally retreated on their principal positions, supported by artillery.

"The Tamboff regiment defended one position from 1 o'clock in the morning until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when its colonel was wounded. The regiment was then driven out of its position by the fire of the Japanese guns from the heights. Six guns were abandoned. Our losses amounted to 1,500. On Aug. 27 the Japanese did not take the offensive to any great extent. The Russians retired on their new positions, while the Japanese advanced to Taempin by way of Yudiukau."

FREE DAY

AT LICKING COUNTY FAIR FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN

Wednesday, Second Day of the County Fair, Will Be Children's Day This Year.

The following circular has been sent out by the Board of the Licking County Agricultural Society to members of all school boards and teachers in Licking county, in reference to "Children's Day" of Fair week. Teachers, aiming to receive a copy of the circular will confer a favor by notifying Mr. J. M. Farmer, the secretary, Newark, Ohio, stating the number of tickets required for their schools on that day, when they will be promptly forwarded to them:

Newark, O., Aug. 29, '04.

To the Members of the Board of Education and Teachers of Licking County:

At the last meeting of the Board of Directors of the Licking County Agricultural Society it was decided to have an Educational Day or Children's Day on Wednesday of Fair week, and that pupils and teachers in all the schools in Licking county be admitted free on that day. The largest crowds are on Thursday and Friday when the children do not get to see near all the exhibits on account of the crowd. By going Wednesday they will avoid this. It has always been the custom of Boards of Education to dismiss school for one or two days to allow the children to attend the Fair. Is there any good reason why you could not make it Wednesday instead of some other day? The parents will be saving money by doing so.

It is the intention of the Board of Directors to establish, if possible, an Educational Department at Licking County Fair for the advancement of education, where samples of writing, drawing, painting, etc., will be on exhibition and prizes awarded. In some counties in this state, this department is a great feature, special buildings being erected in which to place the exhibits, which is the desire of this society.

There is every indication that the coming Fair will be the "best ever," and on "Educational Day," in addition to the general attractions a number of amusements will be provided for the children if possible.

The success of the Fair last year has stimulated the members of the Board of Directors to greater efforts this year, and have made the watchword "progress," and it now remains for the people to second their efforts by giving it their support.

It is the wish of the Society that every school board in the county bring this matter up before the Board of Education and pass a resolution declaring Wednesday a holiday. Kindly notify the Secretary on the enclosed postal card what action you have taken. We earnestly solicit your co-operation in this matter and help to make this one of the largest gatherings of school children ever held in the county.

If teachers will write or call on the Secretary, stating number of tickets required, they will be sent or given you on a short time before the Fair. Address all communications to the Secretary.

W. H. KUSSEMAUL, President.
J. M. FARMER, Secretary. 2945w2t

RUSSIAN FORCES CUT OFF.

Tokyo, Aug. 29.—The general staff maintains silence concerning the fighting in the vicinity of Liao Yang. It is reported that General Kuroki has seized and cut the railroad south of Mukden, thus separating the Russian forces and cutting Liao Yang off from a direct line of retreat, but confirmation of this report can not be obtained. The fighting reported occurring east and southeast of Liao Yang is regarded here as preliminary to a larger contest in the immediate vicinity of Liao Yang. It is expected that Generals Kuroki, Oku and Nodzu will press forward speedily.

ORDINANCE NO. ....

Fighting the Water Bug.

Water bugs and roaches now put forth their best efforts to inhabit every vacant space. In old houses where there is decaying wood it is difficult to exterminate them. A good method is to sprinkle every crack and crevice with fresh cayenne pepper. The peelings of fresh cucumbers strewed around their foraging places at night are said to possess mysterious power to drive them away for good. Another discouragement when they appear in small numbers consists in sprinkling around salt and borax. All remedies should always be accompanied by scrupulous cleanliness.

CHAPTER XXIII.

ON the morning of the fourth day Armstrong was delighted to learn from De Courcy that the king had recovered and would see him at noon. The foreigner engaged the envoy in a long conversation, the object of which was to discover whether or not the girl had said anything to him of the excited conference of the day before. The unsuspecting Scot, entirely off his guard, thinking he spoke with a friend, was read by the other like an open book, and De Courcy was speedily convinced that Frances Wentworth had kept her own counsel. This gave the spy renewed confidence, and as they walked down the street together De Courcy held his head higher than had been the case when he last turned his back upon the Crown inn. His buoyant nature was quick to recover from depression, and his malice, fed anew from his late rebuff, set his alert mind at work to contrive some plan whereby he might save his wounded pride and avenge himself on the girl and his favored rival, even at some slight risk to himself.

Although the danger of exposure seemed imminent enough when he was with her, he knew that as she grew calmer and reflected upon the situation she would be more and more reluctant to wreck everything in order to bring punishment upon him. He would get them out of Oxford that day if possible, but he would instill a poison in the young lover's mind that would take all sweetness from the journey.

De Courcy had offered to show Armstrong the way to the king's rooms, so that there should be no delay when the Scot set out for his appointment at 12 o'clock, and they had now entered the quadrangle of Christchurch, which was deserted save for the guards at the gate. Armstrong thanked him for his guidance, and was turning away, when the other, who seemed about to speak, glanced at the soldiers on duty, then, thinking the spot ill chosen for what he had to say, invited the Scot to his room. They went up a stair together and entered De Courcy's apartment, the host setting out wine and asking his guest to seat himself.

"Has the lady who accompanied you quite recovered from her fatigue?" asked De Courcy indifferently.

"Well, as I told you, I met her yesterday for a few moments only, and I am sorry she was not in the highest spirits, but she will be the better for seeing the green fields again. Like myself, she is of the country, and does not thrive within the walls of a town."

"Yes, I noticed that when she was in London."

"In London? Did you know her in London?"

"Oh, hasn't she told you of our relationship? Perhaps I should not have mentioned it."

"What do you mean by your relationship? You are French; she is pure English."

"De Courcy threw back his head and laughed, unheeding and indeed unnoticing the angry color mounting in a face that had grown suddenly stern."

"My dear comrade, there are other relationships between a young man and a handsome woman than the ties of kinship. But those days are long past, and I should never have recalled them had it not been that you two have been traveling about the country together. I make no doubt, with an innocence that recalls the sylvan days of yore."

"Tell me in plain words what this relationship was to which you have referred."

"First answer me a question. Are you betrothed to Frances Wentworth?"

"No. I told you I acted the brother's part toward her in this journey."

"Oh, we all say that. But I am not in the least curious. If you intended to marry her, then were my mouth sealed. Very well, since you will have it, and I take your word as a gentleman pledged that you will say nothing to the girl of this until you are clear of Oxford. Know that I was once her betrothed. She was to have been my wife, and would have been my wife to-day had her father not fallen."

"Your wife?"

"Yes. Her father gave me permission to pay my court to her. She could not have been much more than sixteen then, and I was her first lover, a personage that a girl never forgets. Her father's ruin changed my plans, and I refused to marry her. I announced this refusal to her in the seclusion of my own room in Whitehall and—"

"Sir, you lie!"

Armstrong's sword seemed to spring of its own will from the scabbard, and his hand drew it a-swish through the air with the hiss of a deadly serpent. The Frenchman shrugged his shoulders, but did not move. The three words of his opponent had been spoken very quietly, despite his impulsive action. De Courcy did not raise his voice as he asked:

"Which of my statements do you question?"

"No matter for that. We fight on this phrase in Scotland. No man ever called me liar and lived."

"'Tis a coarse phrase, I admit, and did I not represent my king—were I as free as you—you should have had my response in steel ere this. But I cannot wreck the king in a private quarrel of my own. Whether you killed me or I you, 'twould be equally disastrous to his majesty."

"I care nothing for the king. Draw, you poulterer, or I shall kill you where you sit."

"My dear Armstrong, I refuse to be murdered under a misapprehension on your part. I have said nothing against the girl. 'Tis all your own hot blood. And indeed your bawling is the girl's greatest danger; she might well tremble if she knew your present occupation. If you run your nimble sword through me, you give the girl to the fate that befell her father."

At the first word of danger to Frances the point of Armstrong's blade sank to the floor, and he stood hesitating. A gleam of triumph glinted and died in the eye of the Frenchman. He knew he was the victor, although the chance he had run at one stage of the game almost made his heart stop beating.

"How can any action of mine jeopardize Lady Frances Wentworth?"

"If the king knew this girl was within his jurisdiction, she would be instantly arrested, tried and condemned. She entered Whitehall the day her father was executed for the sole purpose of murdering Charles. I prevented the carrying out of that purpose, and these scars on my face are the results of my interference with a mad-dened woman."

"Again, you lie, yet if she had killed you both she would have accomplished but justice."

"As to the truth or falsity of my statements, regarding which you make comments of unseemly tenderness, you may ask the king when you see him, or you may ask the lady herself when you get her out of Oxford. If you precipitate a turmoil here, you are like to tumble her pretty head in the basket. When this war is done with I will go far to teach you the correct method of addressing a gentleman."

Armstrong's sword dropped into scabbard again, and he drew a breath that was a sigh. The poison was already at work. He remembered the distress of the girl on the road, and her wall, "I am not worthy the love of any honest man."

"I shall never question her or any other, but will believe her lightest word against the world when she condescends to tell me. Meanwhile I shall get her out of this thieves' den as soon as may be, and when I meet you—"

De Courcy had risen, and now bowed slightly to his perturbed guest.

"Sir, you shall meet me at 12, and it will be my privilege to conduct you to his majesty. Good morning."

He stood by the window overlooking the quadrangle and watched his late visitor cross it, staggering once as if he had partaken freely of the wine which remained untasted on the table. As the Scot disappeared under the archway De Courcy laughed.

"My fine, strutting cockerel," he muttered, "I'll lay you by the heels before two days are past. Cromwell's at Brighton, curse his tattling tongue. How many more has he told of me? Never mind. He's the coming man. The king's game is up, and I shake the dust of Oxford from my feet to-night. St. Denis, if she had only known! Every man in Oxford distrusts me except the king."

When Armstrong was brought before Charles he found no difficulty in convincing the king that he was a well accredited envoy, and his majesty inquired eagerly about the disposition of the Scottish people toward him, the number likely to take the field in his behalf, who their probable leaders were, and how soon they would be ready for the fray. All these questions Armstrong answered as hopefully as he could, in deep commiseration for a defeated man. The king commanded one of his secretaries to write out the required commission, and while this was being done Armstrong related to him the purport of the papers which he had not dared to bring with him.

The names of the nobles were inserted in the document from the dictation of the Scot, then the king's seal was affixed and Charles signed the parchment. He seemed in feverish haste to get the business done with, as if every moment lost was irreparable. When the ink was dried and the parchment folded Armstrong placed it in safe keeping within his vest. While thus engaged the king said a word to the secretary, who handed him a light rapier, then whispered to the messenger the single word "kneel."

The Scot flushed to think he had been wanting in the etiquette of the court, his kind heart yearning to proffer any deference which should be rendered to a monarch, more especially that he was no longer in a position to enforce homage. He dropped on one knee and bowed his head. Charles, rising, touched the rapier blade lightly upon the shoulder of the kneeling man, saying:

"Rise, Sir William Armstrong, and be assured that if you bring this poor signature of mine to Scotland, there is no title in my gift you may not demand of me."

Armstrong rose, awkward as a school boy, not knowing where to look or what to say until he caught the cynical smile of De Courcy standing at the right hand of the king.

"I congratulate you, Sir William," said the Frenchman. The sight of the smile aroused the new hatred against the man which was smoldering in his heart, and he made no reply to the greeting, but said to the king:

"Sir, the only thanks I can tender you is haste to the north, and may God make my arm as strong to defend this signature as my heart is true to your majesty."

With that he turned his back upon royalty, a grievous breach in the eyes of courtiers, and fled.

"God grant it," said the king, with a sigh, as he sank once more in the seat from whence he had risen.

"There is no doubt of it," said De Courcy softly.

"Doubt of what?" asked the king.

"The oath he took will sit lightly on his conscience. He prayed that his arm's strength might equal his heart's fealty. I distrust those who talk glibly of their hearts, and his was a most ambiguous prayer."

"Surely if ever honesty beamed from a man's face it was from Armstrong's. The Scots are trustworthy men."

"Some of them, your majesty."

Uneasy suspicion came into the sunken eyes of the king as he turned them on his chamberlain.

"What do you fear, De Courcy?"

"I have been studying the man these three days past. I accepted without question his assurances, and threw him off his guard. Cromwell loves an honest looking envoy, and from what Armstrong said I am sure he saw Cromwell no farther away than Northampton. He was very ready with his account of his own country people, but he told us nothing about the marvellous luck that brought him safely through a hostile land, which we know to our cost is admirably patrolled."

"If you knew this man to be a traitor or an emissary of that rebel, why did you bring him into our presence?"

"I could not be sure of him, your majesty, and there was always a chance that he was loyal and might get through."

"To raise my hopes like this and then dash them to the ground?"

"Not so, your majesty, if you will pardon me. Do you place importance on this commission?"

"The utmost importance. I know Traquair, and he will raise all Scotland for me if this commission reach him."

"Then we will make siccar, as a famous Scot once said."

"Ah, De Courcy, that was said when a treacherous murder was intended. How will you make sure that Armstrong is honest?"

"I should trouble no more about Armstrong, but if you will issue a duplicate of that commission I will guarantee that it reaches the hand of Traquair. I am a Frenchman and a subject of the French king, I carry my passport to that effect. Even if I am stopped I shall resist search on the ground of my nationality, and Cromwell is too greatly in awe of the power of France to risk its might being thrown in the scale against him. Indeed I doubt if I could offer a greater service to your majesty than to be captured and appeal to Louis."

The king's face cleared.

"You would not stop Armstrong then?"

"Assuredly not. If his copy gets into Cromwell's hands he may slacken his alertness and not be on the outlook for a duplicate. As I said before, there is a chance the Scot plays fair, but two commissions in the hands of Traquair will do no harm, and we make siccar."

"You are in the right, and your advice is always of the best. How soon will you be ready to leave?"

"This very moment, your majesty. There is no time to be lost."

"True! True! True!" Then to the secretary: "Write another. Do you remember the names?"

"Yes, your majesty. I have them here on a slip."

De Courcy bade farewell to the king, who urged him to return as soon as horse could bring him, and went to his room to prepare for his journey, the duplicate commission following him there.

Armstrong strode to the inn, sped up the stair and knocked at the door by the landing. Frances herself opened it, the determination on her face to refuse admission to any other than he melting into a welcome as she greeted him.

"The kiss of Judas! It would kill me!" His arms dropped paralyzed to his sides and he stepped back a pace, amazed at the expression she had used and the terror of her utterance. Next instant he was alone and the closed door between them. Still he stood where she had left him.

"The kiss of Judas! She loves him, thinks me his friend, trying to take Judas advantage of him because we are alone together. De Courcy spoke truth. Woe is mine, she loves him, and I, blind fool—O God, pity that poor girl and this insanity of passion wasted on so rank a cure!"

Frances fled to her room and threw herself on the bed in an agony of tears. This storm subsided into a gentle rain of subdued weeping and finally ceased as she heard the heavy tramp of riding boots in the adjoining room. She sat up in the darkness, listening intently.

He closed the wooden shutters of the window, shaking them to be sure that their fastenings were secure. Then the bolts of the outer door were thrust into their places, but this apparently failing to satisfy the doubts of the inmate, there was a sound of some heavy article of furniture being dragged across the room; then the tramping ceased and all was still. Unheeding she heard the clock in a neighboring tower toll the hour; now it struck again and she counted the notes. Eleven! It was still too early. People slept heavier as the night wore on. One, two, three, four, creeping sensation of horror.

Dependancy seemed to be the portion of William Armstrong as well as of his fair companion. She surmised that he was pondering on the events which had happened when their faces were set south over this course, and in part she was right, but the thoughts which rankled in his mind were those implanted by De Courcy, and the wily Frenchman had been accurate enough in his belief that the young man's pleasure in the northward journey would be spoiled. He could not bring himself to ask any explanation from the girl, nor even tell her what De Courcy had said, for he saw that already a weight of woe oppressed her, and to that burden he would not add a pressure of the slightest word.

He possessed a supreme coincidence in her and only feared that she had loved this runaway once and that some remnant of this long ago affection still remained. Her own words before they reached Oxford, her own action during the encounter fronting the Crown inn, disturbed him far more than the insinuations of the Frenchman. He strove to rid himself of these thoughts, but they were very intrusive and persistent. At last with an effort he roused himself and cried with feigned hilarity:

"Frances, we travel like two mutes. The influence of saddened Oxford is still upon us both. We are long out of sight of the town, so let us be done with all remembrance of it. The meeting with the king this morning has stirred me up to a great pity for him, but vexed meditations on his case are no help either to him or to us. The spur is the only weapon I can wield for him now, so let us gallop and cry, 'God save the king!'"

With that they raced together for a time and were the better of it. He had become almost cheerful again when the spires of Banbury came into view, and thanked fortune that the first stage of their march was safely over.

They found old John and his pack horse both ready for the road again, and Armstrong was plainly loath to let such a fine evening slip by without further progress, but Frances seemed so wan and worn that he had not the heart to propose a more distant stopping place, and, with a sigh, he put up his horse for the night.

While he was gone the innkeeper came furtively to Frances, and, after seeing the pass, led her to the prepared room and showed her the door.

Much against her will, Armstrong insisted upon her coming to supper with him, although she protested she had no appetite, and indeed sat opposite him forlorn and could not touch a morsel. In vain he urged her to eat, but she shook her head, avoiding his glance and keeping her eyes downcast.

"My girl," he said anxiously, "you are completely tired. I see that you are on the point of being ill if better care is not taken. Rest here a few days, I beg of you. Eager as I am to be forward, I will stay if you wish to have me near you, or I will push on and come back for you."

"I shall be well enough in the morning, most like. I am tired tonight."

"And dispirited too."

"Yes, and dispirited. You will excuse me, I know."

Frances rose to her feet, but seemed so faint that she leaned against the table for support. He was by her side at once.

"My sweet lass, I am so sorry for you. Tell me what I can do for you and on my soul my life is yours if you require it."

"No, no! Heaven grant you take no hurt for my sake."

He slipped his arm about her waist and would have drawn her toward him, but with more strength than he had expected her to possess she held away. His great love for her almost overcame him and all the prudence he had gathered was scattered suddenly to the winds. "Dear, dear lass, one touch of our lips and see if all doubts do not dissolve before the contact."

Now she wrenched herself free and would have escaped but that he sprang forward and caught her by the wrists, a grip she was to remember later in the night. In spite of this prisoning, her hands were raised to the sides of her face and a look of such terror shot from her eyes that he feared some madness had come upon her.

"Not that! Not that!" she shrieked. "The kiss of Judas! It would kill me!"

His arms dropped paralyzed to his sides and he stepped back a pace, amazed at the expression she had used and the terror of her utterance. Next instant he was alone and the closed door between them. Still he stood where she had left him.

CATHOLIC

SCHOOL PRINCIPALS MEET AT COLUMBUS.

Uniform System of Books and System of Teaching—Newark Was Represented at the Meeting.

Every Catholic school in the Columbus diocese was represented at the meeting of principals held at the Holy Cross school in Columbus.

The meeting was called to order by Rev. F. W. Howard, president of the school board, who introduced Bishop Hartley as the temporary presiding officer. In accepting Bishop Hartley delivered a short but interesting address in which he referred to the work accomplished in Catholic schools.

The study of Christianity, the Bishop contended, should go hand in hand with the studies of the schools of today, and the one was as essential as the other. He suggested a uniform system of teaching and likewise uniform system of school books.

The first business of importance was the adoption of a uniform system of books. This includes Gilmour's readers, Harvey's grammar, Ray's arithmetic and Frey's geography.

Rev. J. C. Eis read a paper on "Instruction on Religion," in which he explained the history and methods of teaching catechism.

Paper on drawing and a uniform system of teaching were read by sisters of the Notre Dame and Mercy.

Among the members of the clergy present were Rev. J. J. Schneider, Ironton; Rev. L. W. Mulhane, Mt. Vernon, and Rev. J. Weigand, Steubenville. Principals were in attendance from Lancaster, Delaware, Circleville, Steubenville, Portsmouth, Ironton, Pomeroy, Marietta, Bellaire, Columbus and Newark.

"I had a running, itching sore on my leg. Suffered tortures. Doan's Ointment took away the burning and itching instantly and quickly effected permanent cure." C. W. Lenhart, Bowling Green, O.

FAIR BOARD

MEETS TO ARRANGE FOR THE ANNUAL EXHIBIT.

Racing Promises to Be the Best Had in Recent Years—Improvements to Be Made on the Grounds.

Saturday the board of directors of the Licking County Agricultural society met in the office of the secretary in the basement of the courthouse, and took up several matters towards making final arrangements for the coming fair.

Many improvements have been made on the grounds and buildings and all the indications are that the coming fair will be the biggest and most attractive held in the history of the society. It is reported that the finest races ever seen on the fair grounds track, will be provided.

At the meeting on Saturday it was ordered that a new barn be constructed with a capacity of about 50 stalls.

The Newark Board of Public Service appeared before the board and asked for the privilege of opening Williams street on land belonging to the society, which request was refused.

Superintendent of grounds, Frank Dugnon, was authorized to have a new roof placed on the amphitheater. The cattle and horse barns are also to be repaired and put in first-class condition.

Everything points to a most successful meeting, and those who attend will surely feel repaid for going. Old friendships will be renewed and new ones framed while viewing samples of American progress on the field and in the factory. After all, these modern country fairs are the best places for solid enjoyment, popular education and amusement that can be found.

HAIR NATURALLY ABUNDANT.

When It Is Free of Dandruff, It Grows Luxuriantly.

Hair preparations and dandruff cures, as a rule, are sticky or irritating affairs that do no earthly good. Hair, when not diseased, grows naturally, luxuriantly. Dandruff is the cause of nine-tenths of all hair trouble, and dandruff is caused by a germ. The only way to cure dandruff is to kill the germ; and, so far, the only hair preparation that will positively destroy the germ is Newbro's Herpicide—absolutely harmless, free from grease, sediment, dye matter or dangerous drugs. It allays itching instantly; makes hair glossy and soft as silk. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect." Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

C. T. Ericker, Special Agent.

CONDITION

OF MRS. HARRY THRAIKILL IS STILL SERIOUS.

She Said Her Husband Committed the Murderous Assault Early Saturday Morning.

Mrs. Laura Thraikill, who was found unconscious Saturday morning, from wounds received as she claimed, at the hands of her husband, Harry Thraikill, was considerably improved Monday, although still serious. Dr. C. A. Hatch found that the woman's back was not broken but very seriously sprained. The cuts and bruises were also dressed and she will probably recover unless some complications set in.

There was not a square inch on the woman's body that was not bruised by kicks and blows.

She said that the assault occurred about 4 o'clock Saturday morning, when she upbraided him for gambling his money away. He said he would kill her and probably thought he had, as he got all the money in the house, about $500, and has not been seen since. The police are anxious to effect his capture, and nothing will be left undone to accomplish it.

She was unconscious from the time he left until found about noon.
